Boy: Hi, Sue! Will you help me choose a present for Mary?

Girl: Sure. What is Mary into?

Boy: Well, she loves horses, that's for sure. But I wouldn't like to get any accessories for horse-riding

Girl: I get the point. What about a book about horses?

Boy: Sounds like a good idea, but Mary isn't a bookworm, to be honest.

Girl: What about this top with a unicorn or that wallet with a horse shoe?

Boy: That's perfect for Mary. And I'll put a coin in it, for good luck. Thanks, Sue.

I finally have my own room. I've had enough sharing ten square metres with my younger brother. A bunk bed, a shared wardrobe and one desk for both of us. That's not my problem anymore. We've moved into a detached house and we now Steven and I each have our own room. He's got his mess, his collection of comics and his games console. And my place is just mine. My own comfortable bed, my clean desk, my plants and a carpet I'd been dreaming about. At last...

Boy: Oh my... Who's chosen the film? I bet it was Chloe. She's fond of comedies...

Girl: Well, yes. It was Chloe. But last time we saw your favourite science fiction, remember?

Boy: OK, OK. Shall we get some popcorn or crisps and some drinks before the film?

Girl: I'm afraid they won't let us in with the food. You can only bring food and drinks bought at the cinema bar.

Boy: You're right. Why are we here then?

Girl: I promised Mum to get some fruit, pasta and mayonnaise. She'll meet us in front of the cinema to take the shopping.

Boy: I see. Let's do the shopping then.

Hi Emma, it's Mark. I wanted to talk to you but perhaps a voicemail is even better. I feel awful. We haven't talked for three days now. The silence is killing me. And I know it's my fault. I cancelled our meeting to see Polly. But, believe me, it wasn't for her. I just wanted to see the match and she had the tickets. As simple as that. No other excuse. I hope you'll forgive me and we'll be best friends again. Call me, please.

I've only been to a summer camp once and I don't think I'll ever go to one again. I had to wake up at seven every day to do morning gymnastics, then three hours of sports after breakfast and another three after lunch, plus evening sports activities, as if the six hours earlier weren't enough. No free time, no time to relax. And my roommates? Full of energy till midnight. So no peace even in my own bed... Definitely not my cup of tea.

Wypowiedź 2.

My parents sent me to my first summer camp when I was nine. Now I'm fourteen and I can't imagine a summer holiday without a camp. It's what I wait for throughout the entire school year. Why? I'd say good company is reason number one and fun is reason number two. I met Sara and Mia at my first camp and since then we've always spent two camp weeks together, sharing a room and doing all those crazy camp activities.

Wypowiedź 3.

I'm a very active and sociable person. I've got lots of friends and plenty of things to do every day. I'm never bored. That's why I can't imagine how some teenagers can spend a summer holiday at their grandparents' cottage. I'd be bored to death. That's why I always spend summer at different camps where I have not a minute to think about boredom. Sports, arts and crafts, music, games and lots of teens around. What else would I need?

Wypowiedź 4.

My parents often say I'm lucky to have the chance to choose a camp I like best. And they're right. The selection of summer camps for teens is really wide. I choose a different type of camp every summer. I've been to a water sports camp, a rock music one and even to a chess camp. I love variety and challenges. I'm also open to making new friends, which is why I always go alone and usually make friends with my roommates.

Girl: Did you know, Mike, that it's possible to be allergic to water?

Boy: You're kidding, Sue! Dust, food, fur, yes, these things people are often allergic to. But water?

Girl: Well, water allergy is very rare, but it happens. I've just read an article about a girl who was twelve when she first had symptoms of water allergy. She went for a swim and then her skin broke out in a terrible rash. Doctors diagnosed her with allergy to water.

Boy: Unbelievable. How does she wash?

Girl: Well, every second in a bath makes her suffer, so she only has a shower once a week.

Boy: Can't believe it. What about water to drink?

Girl: She can't drink water, as I've read, so she drinks milk and diet coke instead.

Boy: No tea or coffee probably either.

Girl: Not if she doesn't want to suffer. Also, she should avoid eating some fruit and vegetables.

Boy: Oh, my... Sounds like a nightmare.

Girl: The only hope is that water allergy doesn't last forever, so it should go away one day.

Boy: I hope it does!
