I Read an article about Hallowe'en. Seven sentences have been removed from the article. Choose from the sentences A-H the one which fits each gap (1-7). There is ONE extra sentence which you do not need to use. (7 points)

THE TROUBLE WITH HALLOWE'EN

One of my greatest disappointments as a child was not having been born in America. I knew from my library that they had a great deal of fun over there. They had Disneyland on their doorstep, and perhaps more importantly, they celebrated Hallowe'en.

Exactly what Hallowe'en meant, the books never really explained: I knew its origins were Irish, but little more. 1 _____ Besides, any festival that involved ghosts, skeletons, dressing up, doing clever things with exotic vegetables (I had never seen a pumpkin) and annoying grumpy old neighbours just had to be fun.

Twenty years on we now have EuroDisney on our own doorstep, and Hallowe'en is almost as important in Britain as New Year's Eve or Christmas Day. 2 _____ However, I have recently had cause to wonder whether Hallowe'en is such a good thing after all and now I view the whole thing with deep suspicion.

This change of attitude occurred last October, when I spent my first Hallowe'en with my girlfriend's son, James. 3 _____ The pumpkin was overpriced, but I had never made a death's head mask before and I found it very satisfying cutting out the teeth shapes in its mouth. So satisfying, indeed, that I didn't want to stop. This led to a disagreement between James and myself as to how much of the pumpkin each of us should be allowed to carve. The disagreement turned into a heated argument and James left the scene in a raging temper.

Worse was to follow. While I made pumpkin soup in the kitchen I heard shrieks of protest from the sitting-room. James wanted to go trick-or-treating. 4 _____ Feeling a bit of a killjoy after the pumpkin incident, I decided to act as a mediator. Yes, he could go, I decreed, provided he went with a group of friends. Now it was his mother's turn to get upset. It just wasn't safe for the boy to go knocking on strange people's doors on a dark, foggy October night.

5 _____ But by then, there had been another row, 'No way!' I shouted. 'No way am I going to let you cut holes in a perfectly good sheet just to make a ghost costume which will only be used for 10 minutes!' Only after being assured that it was partly made of polyester did I give in.

It all seemed worthwhile when James returned from his expedition clutching an impressive quantity of sweets and fruit. At least he would spend his pocket money on something other than chocolate for the next few weekends. James had other ideas. 6 _____ And so began another argument which might have gone on until bedtime if we had not been rescued by the arrival of numerous other trick-or-treaters.

However, our supply of tangerines had run out. There was only one thing for it: we would have to dip into James's sweet collection. Needless to say, it ended in tears. 7 _____ Guy Fawkes Night seems a safer, less controversial alternative.

Adapted from Macmillan Exams, Ready for FCE, R. Norris, 2008

A His mother thought he was too young.

B Understandably, perhaps, it is celebrated by fewer people than before.

C They have of course dried up now, but they left their mark and a feeling that Hallowe'en may be more trouble than it is worth.

D At first it all seemed quite enjoyable.

E This problem was resolved when a neighbouring parent agreed to escort the trick-or-treat party on their rounds.

F However, this element of mystery added to the excitement.

G He intended to eat them all immediately.

H Considering my love of America and its traditions as a child, I suppose I should see this development as a cause for rejoicing.
