Been to Benidorm, Bali and the Greek Isles? Tired of all the typical tourist resorts? Why not treat yourself to a holiday in space?

In just a few years from now your local travel agent may well try to tempt you in this way into taking a short break in a futuristic space hotel, with the chance to look down on all the sights of our planet from over 60 miles up.

(0).I..... Now, at the start of the new millennium, it is beginning to become a reality. With the first short commercial passenger flights into space already fully booked, private companies are now turning their attention to holidaymakers wanting to spend longer periods of time outside the Earth's atmosphere. 1.

The hotel will rotate as it orbits the Earth every 90 minutes, resulting in weightlessness at its centre and 20 per cent of normal gravity in all other areas. 2.

Mark Levy of Gerard and Burns says: 'We are currently working out what experience we can provide for the 200 guests which the hotel will accommodate – a 30-minute space walk, for example, or maybe one day an optional trip orbiting the Moon.' 3.

Before that can happen engineers have to develop safe and low-cost spacecraft to transport us there. NASA has already invested a billion dollars in a project to build a reusable space vehicle.

4. One such company, Dream Ships of California, is about to start building its Cosmos Freeway hypersonic aircraft, which will be capable of travelling at a height of 65 miles and able to fly from New York to London in 20 minutes.

5. Thousands of small objects orbiting the Earth – parts of old satellites and other space debris travelling at several thousand miles per hour – could do serious damage to spacecraft.

Even if they do manage to get there safely, many of the passengers are likely to suffer space sickness: feel dizzy, sweat and maybe vomit. 6.

But for those who are prepared to put up with the lack of comfort in space, the view will definitely make up for the drawbacks. 'From nowhere else can you appreciate the full size and wonder of the Earth,' says Mark Levy. 'It's a chance not to be missed.'

7. The holiday of a lifetime awaits you.

A) He also foresees games played in weightless conditions including 'zero-gravity basketball' and 'air tennis'.

B) And everyone will notice the effects of space adaption syndrome, which affects one's sense of direction and causes bodily fluids to move towards the head.

C) Tourists will soon be preparing to stay for several days in an orbiting space hotel, such as the one designed by American construction company, Gerard and Burns.

- D) So book your tickets now.
- E) This lack of space is not the only discomfort the first guests will have to put up with.
- F) And more than a dozen small private companies in the US and Europe are racing to do the same.
- G) It will probably take some two years to assemble and fit out the hotel, which is expected to travel about 200 miles above the planet.
- H) But there are one or two potential problems which might make people think twice before heading for space.

I) Not so long ago the idea of space travel for all was just a dream (przykład).
